Virtual Travel Troubleshooting

Your itinerary has been accepted and you're on your way to the airport. Unfortunately, it seems this trip was too good to be true, and you are left to deal with several challenges that have been slowly bubbling. Use the language model of your choice to troubleshoot these issues and find solutions or alternatives plans to make the most of your trip. The language model should be used for most of the planning, but fact check the model using alternative sources whenever necessary. Make sure to correct the model if necessary. Submit your final alternative plans, chat logs, and method of fact checking to the instructor before the start of the next class a. Your flight to the destination has been canceled, and you need to find alternative transportation options.

Obstacles

b. You lost your wallet or important travel documents (passport, visa, etc.), and you need to figure out what to do.

c. You've arrived at your accommodation, but there's an issue with your reservation, and the hotel is fully booked.

d. You encounter a language barrier while trying to communicate with locals or find your way around the destination.

e. You've planned an outdoor activity, but the weather suddenly turns bad, and you need a backup plan.
